The manager reports increasing demand for their guaranteed pure milk and cream and states that an addition of 10 pure bred Holstein cows, all in milk, which arrived at the farm Saturday, adds both in beauty to the herd and in quality and quantity of the product, and is necessary to supply the demand. Four more cows of the same type will be added. Improvements for better sanitary conditions of the stable and health of the cattle and for the better handling of milk and cream are well advanced and have already called forth many favorable comments from those interested in a pure and clean article from the dairy.

THE SUPPLY OF PEARLS.

The Purpose of Scientific Investigation in the Ceylon Fisheries.

The pearl banks of Ceylon it may be pointed out are merely sand banks formed of sandstone and concretions upon which isolated masses of coral grow without forming reefs, so that severe disturbance of the oyster bed may very easily be set up. It is found that the collection of the spores by native divers is slow, but the most satisfactory.

The pearl bearing oyster is not a true oyster for edible purposes, but is more closely allied to the mussel family. It differs from the ordinary animal in having a "byssus," or bundle of tough threads, by which it secures a firm adherence to suitable materials, and similar to the facilities possessed by the mussel. Attempts are being made in cultivating this oyster by artificial impregnation of the pearl forming larvae. Investigation is being carried out to ascertain the origin of the spat and how it periodically disappears. In connection with this research a thorough study is being made of the sea currents on and around the oyster banks and of the surface drift in the gulf.

The fishery is very intermittent. Prior to 1903 there had been none for twelve years, and the situation became so serious that a commission was appointed to investigate the subject. In 1903 the harvest was the greatest on record. Over 80,000,000 oysters were collected, realizing $1,250,000, two-thirds going to the island's treasury. In the subsequent two years it dwindled regularly, and 1908 proved barren. It is against the recurrence of intermittent fat and lean years that scientific developments are being conducted so that the fishery each year may be of more steady and reliable proportions. By the assistance of scientists it is anticipated that the speculative character of the enterprise may be almost eliminated.

During the last few years the tendency toward "community of interests" had developed among the natives at the auction sales. A "ring" was formed to bring prices down, at the same time keeping out small purchasers, but this was promptly suspended the auction indefinitely. The members of the ring, apprehensive that their journey to the island would prove abortive, broke up, since which time there has never been any attempt at "combination."—Scientific American.

Fast Typesetting Machine.

To build a type-setting machine that would use ready-made type and thus do away with the use of molten metal and power, has been the ambition of quite a number of inventors for some time past. Many difficulties, however, have beset their path in success, but A. G. Baker, the inventor of a new type-setting machine, seems to have overcome the many difficulties and now has on exhibition a machine which not only operates without power or fire, but will set foundry-made type faster than any other machine of its kind thus far produced. The machine is a very compact one, measuring only sixteen inches long, sixteen inches wide and twenty-eight inches high, yet it has a capacity of ten lines a minute of ordinary one-inch length to six lines a minute of the fastest machines now in use. Technically speaking, it will set 10,000 ems an hour, as against older machines 6,000 to 7,000. Its weight is only 125 pounds.

The upright portion of the machine, called the magazine, consists of ninety channels, containing the different letters of the alphabet, punctuation marks and other characters used in printing. Each channel is just wide enough to contain the character allotted to it without allowing it any more room than is necessary to slide up and down easily. The channels are entirely independent of each other so that any one of them can be removed from the machine instantly if desired without disturbing the others.
